MISCELLANY.

ODE TO MY NEW BONNET.

Soft triangle of straw and lace That curves around my blushing face With such a coy, bewitching grace
No mortal man would dream your place Was on my haed.

Your airy touch can scarcely press The shape from curl or flowing tress, So light, so next to nothingness, You surely could not well be less And be a bonnet.

A bit of straw adorned with leather, A yard of lace, a spray of heather, Some bugles and a tossing feather, These trifles shaken all together— Thus you were made.

No cape with starchy nettling lined, No buckram crown projects behind; But streamers flutter in the wind; There flows, in silken mesh confined My water-fall.

Yet most your dainty form I prize, As sweeping back above mine eyes It lets the drinkled hillocks rise, Where underneath, in ambush lies My pair of mice.

But when rough autumn winds sweep past And all your laces shake aghast, Then can you shield me from the blast, And round my neck a shelter cast To keep me warm?

Alas, a summer friend are you, And only kind while skies are blue; 9,000 00 I long have known the saying true-Old friends are better than the new When trouble comes o ere the dog-day heats be fled 40,500 00 Let me your flimsy glories spread; For soon as winter whistles dread 42,000 00 I'll tie once more about my head My old scoop bonnet.

The Arabian Girl's Revenge.

A curious story is just now occupying th coteries of the Faubourg St. Germain. So : e three or four months since the grea heart of the old Faubourg was made to bear with a strange emotion. It was rumored that the most beautiful of all its wealthy 30,000 33,000 00 heiresses-the most loved, and the most courted, and the most admired-had sud denly taken the determination of entering the Convent of the Visitation, at the Barriere St. Jaques, after a severe illness brought on by some mysterious cause, which the whole of the Faubourg, although uniting together all their curiosity, inquisitiveness and penetration, had never been able to discover. The young lady had been upon the point of marriage with a gentleman of standing and station in society, of equal rank 20,000 27,000 00 and fortune with herself, and of great reputa tion in the scientific wordl. He had trav-elled much in the East. His work on Pal-estine is the first of its kind yet published, and altogether every excuse was made for the deep affection he had inspired. As we have said, the lover had travelled much in the East, and there were the usual stories affoat concerning the mystery of the exquisitely furnished entresol he inhabited in the Rue de Verennes, into which not even his mos ntimate friends had ever penetrated, and whence he sometimes stirred not for weeks together. Dark insinuations were some times ventured upon by the over-suspiciou in these matters. The mansion wherein he had fitted up this retreat belongs to his mother, who seldom visits Paris. The garden is large and retired, and the neighbors sometimes wondered at hearing on moon ight nights a sound like that of a guitar oming up from beneath the trees, accompanied by a weak, small voice, somewhat shrill and nasal, but evidently expressive of ove, in the songs which it attempted to render. Folks are generally very frank on the subject of other people's faults, and numberless were the kind friends who insist ed on the mystery being penetrated; but the heiress, past the bloom of early youth, begged permission to judge for herself. Sh had been surrounded by suitors every since she could remember, but had never been really in love until this knight, artist, poet and savant had appeared before her. The day of the wedding drew near, and confi> ervently that he had suffered her to accom 'My heart was free when I consented to her request," said the lover:—"I had not seen you then. But now my views in life are altered, and I must be rid, with honor, young lady on the point of inquiring into the secret which she fancied was the only one he had kept from her, when suddenly and without preamble, the long-wished-for beauty belonging to any clime or country, and she looked upon the interview rather a an amusement than otherwise. The very evening of the departure it was therefore fixed to take place. The carriage, laden with the baggage, stopped beneath the gateway of the hotel where the young lady re sided. A female-figure, veiled from head to foot, alighted, and, leaning on the arm of the gentleman, whose mien was sad and serious, mounted the stairs, at the head of which, all smiles and beaming benevolence stood the heroine.

No welcome could have been more cordial. no greeting more warm. The little slave was coaxed and pacified, and made to feel that no kind of jealousy lurked at the bottom of the Christian's soul. She gazed with dark and envious admiration at the fair, dazzling beauty of her rival, but she receiv ed her caresses with something like grati-tude nevertheless. At the moment of partng, the heiress, superb and generous in all things, drew the poor forlorn stranger to her bosom, and placed round her neck a chain of considerable value. At this the wretched girl seemed overcome, and she asked per-mission to embrace the lady for so much kindness. This was accorded right merrily The heiress bestowed a hearty kiss upon the stranger, which the latter returned with such usury that a slight scream escaped her lips, and presently she laughed at her own absurdity in having expressed pain at the lit-tle scratch which had been made upon her cheek by one of the spiked gold ornaments of the oriental headdress worn by the stranger. The lover departed with his charge ing from a strange disease. No one was admitted near her; the doctors were powercould recognize in the hideous features which ing on a toss of whiskey!" the lay sister dresses every morning with such pitying care, the once lovely counten

A ROMAN HERO.

In the war between Rome and Carthage, the Consul Regulus was taken captive. He was kept a close prisoner for two years, pining and sickening in his loneliness, while in he meantime the war continued, and at last victory so decisive was gained by the Romans, that the people of Carthage were dis-couraged, and resolved to ask terms of peace. They thought that no one would be so read ly listened to at Rome as Regulus, and the herefore sent him there with their envoys having first made him swear that he would come back to his prison if there should ne ther be peace or an exchange of prisoners They little knew how much more a true

His wife Marcia ran out to greet him, with his two sons, but he did not look up, and received their caresses as one beneath their no tice, as a mere slave; and he continued i spite of all entreaty, to remain outside the he had loved so well.

The Roman Senate, as he would not come n to them, came out to hold their meeting in the Champagna.

The ambassadors spoke first; then Regu lus, standing up said, as one repeating a task Conscript fathers, being a slave to the Carthaginians. I come on the part of my mas ters to treat with you concerning peace and an exchange of prisoners." He then turned to go away with the ambassadors, as a stranger might not be present at the deliberations of the Senate. His old friends pressed him to stay and give his opinion as a Senato who had twice been Consul, but he refused great trouble was on his mind. He had to degrade the dignity by claiming it; but, at brought from Constantinople an Arabian the command of his Carthaginian masters irl, who had attached herself to him so he remained, though not taking his seat.

Then he spoke. He told the Senators to persevere in the war. He said that he had een the distress of Carthage, and that a peace would be only to her advantage, not to that of Rome, and therefore he strongly advised that the war should continue. Then as to the exchange of prisoners, the Cartha ginian Generals, who were in the hands of strength, while he himself was too much pitied the girl and pardened the lover, and broken down to be of service again, and indeed he believed that his enemy had given ed to ask-permission to convey the poor him a slow poison, and that he could not tranger back again to her native land. A Good Old Minister.

Dr. John Brown in his charming "Spare Hours," gives a pleasant sketch of an uncle one of the abstracted, kindhearted minis. ters, great in his profession, but ill-versed in the ways of the world. One of his adventures is exquisitely told:

Uncle Ebenezer, with all his mildness and eneral complaisance, was, like most of the Browns, firm to obstinacy. He had estab-lished a weekly-day sermon at the North Ferry, about two miles from his own town. Inverkeithing. It was winter, and a wild, drifting, and a dangerous day; his daugh ters-his wife was dead-besought him not to go; he smiled vaguely, but continued get-ting into his great coat. Nothing would stay him, and away he and the pony stumbled through the dumb and blinding snow.

He was half-way on his journey, and had got into the sermon he was going to preach, and was utterly insensible to the outward storm; his pony getting his feet balled, staggered about, and at last upset his master and himself into the ditch at the roadside. The feeble, heedless, wrapt old man might have perished there, had not some carters bringing up casks of whiskey from the ferry seen the catastrophe, and rushed up, raising him, and ditchin' him, with much commiseration and blunt speech: "Puir auld man, what brocht ye here in sic a day There they were, a rough crew, surrounding the saintly man, some putting on his l hat, sorting and cheering him, and others but he always felt uneasy after having beheld the gloomy smile which had greeted the single drop of blood which had followed the wound! Soon after, as we have already said, the lady was pronounced to be suffering from a strange disease. No one was all hearten ye? He took the kerten ye? He took the kerten ye? 'll hearten ye." He took the horn, and admitted near her; the doctors were power-less, the malady grew worse, and finally it was declared that the patient had retired to the Visitation, where the ladies possess a asked a blessing on it, and for his kind decertain remedy for cancer. But from the liverers, and took a tasting of the hornconvent she never meant to remove. Not long ago she became a member of the sisterhood, and lo! at the banquet given on when the rest arrived in Inverkeithing, they Sunday last, she was the only one whose repeated the story to every body and broke down in tears when ever they came to the sight is frightful to behold, and that no one blessing. Italy.

There has never been a good understanding between the government of Pius IX. and that of Victor Emanuel. From the time when the king, soon after his accession to the throne, secularized the property of the church, and took from the clergy the all ages, could not furnish the required stimexclusive control of education, the pope has not ceased to regard him as an enemy of religion, and of the Roman Catholic church. Though it is more than ten years since Victor Emanuel was excommunicated for these first encroachments upon the ecclesiastical prerogatives of Rome, the subsequent events of Italian history have tended to deepen, rather than to assuage, the feeling then excited in the bosom of his holiness. The formation of the kingdom of Italy, including not only Lombardy, but Tuscany, Naples, and even the greater portion of the states of the church, and the purpose of the Italian government, the ardent desire of the people is that Rome should be occupied and proclaimed as the capital of the new power, have only the more exasperated the pontifical authorities. Nor is the character of the crisis the least mitigated in their eyes by the fact that their tenure of Rome, and their freedom to act there in any manner, except by the sufferorders of Napoleon, whom they distrust and

Nevertheless, it is no secret that negotiations have for several months been going on between the cabinet of Turin and the cabi- peror. Santa Anna, at the head of the Renet of the Vatican, and the hopes of the more moderate liberals of Europe have been perialists. He raised an insurrection against much animated by the apparent possibility | Pedraza. of a reconciliation. The starting point of the undertaking appears to have been found in the fact that seventy Italian bishoprics are vacant. These cannot be filled without the consent of both the government of Italy and the papal see. The vacancy of so great a number of important ecclesiastical dignities is the cause of much inconvenience both at Florence and at Rome. Our readers can clearly understand that it is no trifle in a country like Italy that all episcopal functions are suspended in seventy extensive and populous districts. The people suffer and murmur at the privation; and the interests of neither kingdom or papacy are subserved; though probably of the two the papacy is the greater sufferer.

ment is said to have proceeded from the without special ceremony, to Victor Emanuel, requesting him to send a confidential envoy to Rome. The Commander Vegezzi was selected and sent accordingly, and communications have been constant between him and Cardinal Antonelli, The Italian government has, we believe, proposed to guarantee to the papal see the secure possession of the city of Rome and its immedi ate dependencies; to protect the independence of the pope; and to furnish to his ho liness, in consideration of recognition of the kingdom of Italy, the formal renunciation of every claim to the former provinces of the church which now constitute a portion of the kingdom, and the withdrawal of all countenance to the king of Naples or other pretenders, an annual revenue that shall be an ample equivalent for all that the pope is asked to concede. Along with this proposal, Vegezzi offered to negotiate a concordat regulating the appointment of Italian bish ops, whereby the king should nominate and the pope confirm them.

The papal see has, we believe, shown throughout the transactions, a steady disposition to yield none of the important points required by Victor Emanuel. The pope was especially unwilling to renounce the title to the lost provinces. In fact, he would consent to little else except an arrangement respecting the bishoprics. Accordingly, the attempt has resulted in nothing except to prove that it is not now possible for the two governments to arrive at an agreement.

It has been alleged that the French em peror has threatened to withdraw his troops from Rome in the event of this failure, but we presume they will remain there. We do Pius IX. but justice, however, when we say that his decisions are not formed from re gard to their external consequences. He would refuse the offers of Victor Emanuel with equal firmness, whether their refusal would lose him the possession of Rome or not. - Chicago Republican.

The Late Rebellion, and the Lack of True Inspiration in Those who Re-

The complete ending of the rebellion con-inues to puzzle those European publicists, who had so long ago determined the issue the conflict by the logic of history, and invincible array of precedents. It is yet all but impossible for them to realize the fact that a territory of so vast extent, of such exhaustless resources, with such variety in surface and geographical character such strength of strategic position, fertility n supplies, facilities of intercommunica tion, numbering so large a population, oc cupied by a people possessing an extraordi ary military and aristocratic basis of poitical institutions, on which the whol framework of society rested, could be re duced to submission by any possible for-tune of war. The trouble with these foreign diviners was their failure to see that we were making, instead of following history, and creating, instead of accepting precedents.

Yet, it is doubtless true, that a large body of the people of the Southern States believe ed they could be free from the Union, i they would, and appealed, like their Europ ean advocates, for the sustenance of their faith to history and internal conviction. I was this persuasion which drove such civil ians as Stephens and such soldiers as Johnston into the war, and filled really able Southern journalism with invectives against the "folly and madness" of the North, in dreaming she could coerce seven millions of brave people into obedience to the National Government. The same faith found sufficient root here to disturb us in the North for a time. But the result was that it made the government—in time—watchful and so-ber, as well as resolute, and toned popular excitement down to stern patriotic devotion lthough we had to encounter all the while he timid and selfish among that class o our people who raised a periodical cry for an armistice, and peace at any price.

The secret of onr strength in defiance of all the discouraging arguments offered to prove that we should fail, lay in the fact that the great body of the American people believed that the South lacked a good cause for which to fight. An army may battle for its flag alone, but a nation must have a principle at stake. It was precisely because the South had no tyranny to be free from, that she never could get to the point of voluntary self-sacrifice, stubborn as was her re-sistance for the time, which might have as-sured her freedom. To bring out such virtuous immolation to principle, the principle must be worth the offering. An institution re pugnant to the spirit of progress and of the age, an institution offensive to humanity in The project to found a new republic as Mr. Stephens said, with slavery as a corner-stone, did not yield a motive ample enough. Nor did the scheme to tear asunder our glorious Union-to gratify the vanity, passion and ambition of a privileged class-suffice. When the tyranny, covetousness and selfishness of the rebel leaders at length came to be exposed, in the progress of the war, the halo which surrounded the personal figures of their chiefs failed to attract the Southern people; and the rebelion, losing "the motive and the cue for passion" which it started with, fell through evconsciousness that, whatever be the declared en more rapidly than it broke upon the Santa Anna, probably, sees mischief brewing against the Empire, and he wants to be in at the death. But the Mexican Liberals will have nothing to do with such a disorganizer, who only two years ago, publicly approved of Maximilian's intentions in Mex co. The accounts from Mexico confirm the Liberal view of the condition of affairs in Mexico. Maximilian, instead of advancing an army to the Rio Grande to repel antici pated assaults from the United States, has not enough force to maintain peace and or-der in the country under the immediate charge of his bayonets. BOBBING AROUND.—The old Democracy a party that stinks in the nostrils of every oyal man, per se, in the country, is bobbing around again. Its leaders are coaxing, wooing and flattering President Johnson hoping, as the phrase goes, to "Tylerize" him. That is, they would have him prove traitor to the party that elected him, just as John Tyler did upon succeeding to the there-were any wisdom left in them, the Presidency upon the death of Harrison. Others are endeavoring to engineer Gen. Sherman upon the track, while others again, strange as it may appear, are endeavoring to put the party on a negro suffrage platorm, and thus hope to take the wind out of the sails of the Republican party.

In all of these games of strategy they will lose. President Johnson is not a John with many more like him, if they were wise Tyler. He is made of sterner material. Justice Coming Home.

Students at the United States naval acaemies are not permitted to marry, but some time since, before the naval school was removed from Annapolis, an amorous cadet inwilling to defer his happiness till the receipt of his commission, ventured upon a private marriage with a young beauty of the place. Nothing remained but to keep the secret. The preacher knew nothing of this, however, and cursorily let the mouse out of the trap, so that an old professor, who disliked cadets because they besieged in squads a certain pretty daughter he had, ascertained the fact without ascertaining but one of the names, and he court-martialed the cadet immediately. Despite the personal entreaties of the youth, the case was brought up. He acknowledged the fact, pleaded guilty and fell back upon the mercy of the court. Extensive Silk and Wine Growing Proposition.

A proposition has been made to the Agricultural Bureau by Attılia Valtellina, of Lombardy, Italy, to colonize eighty-two Italians in the Scate of New York or New Jersey, for the purpose of raising silks and wines. The proposer agrees to furnish one million grapevines and ten thousand mulberry trees, and will transport the laborers to this country for $40,000, one-half to be expended in the purchase of vines, trees, silk worms, implements and other expenses. He says he has a perfect knowledge of the business, and that such a farm or plantation could be put in operation in three or four months. The first two years the production would be nominal, but the third it would pay a profit, and the fifth year he estimates the production at the enormous figure of $800,-000.000

He says the climate of the States named s well adapted to the culture of wine and silks, and it only needs experienced workmen to develope the capabilities of the soil, which will render us entirely independent of foreign nations for wines and silks, which can be produced in this country as plentifully and as cheaply as in Italy. He refers to Hon. Geo. C. Marsh American, Consul at Turin, as a guarantor of his ability to per form what he proposes. The Agricultural Bureau having no authority to engage in en-terprises of this kind, cannot entertain the proposition, but it is a matter well worthy the attention of capitalists.

J. C. Breckinridge on Cruelty.

There are few of us who have forgotten that famous, or rather that infamous adess of John C. Breckinridge, when, having safely skedaddled into the Confederate lines, he denounced President Lincoln in bitter and almost beastly language, and detailed what things were not to be done while the gallant sons of Kentucky could 'make that State sing to the music of their

Allowance may be made for the exagge ated feelings which called forth such diaribes four years ago, as we know how many men there are whose former denunciation of the North are now only a source of shame and vexation to themselves. But the !times are altered. Men front to front on the field spect, and the ac cusations of the most violent become tempered by the stern logic of war. And, there fore, it is surprising that a man, even of the bad experience of John C. Mr. Breckinridge writes from Cuba whence, it is to be presumed, he wishes to return. As a preliminary to this return he does what? Act like a man beaten in fair fight and willing to own it? Not at all. He indulges in much the same talk as he used four years ago, and has the assurance to caution the government that there can be no lasting peace founded upon crnelty and oppression. Cruelty and oppression! Was it not cruelty and oppression that created that irrepressible conflict which has had so fearful a almination? No one knows better that J . So soon as he got home he took the matter in hand, and has published his programme, which dispenses with the military authority for civil purposes, and gives the Algerines the an attempt to whitewash him, and induce same civil law that Frenchmen have in Paris, or any other part of France. Expenditures on fortifications and military posts are to be stopped, local self-government encouraged, the religion of the Algerines to be respected, frontier custom houses abolished, ports to be abolished, ports to be thrown open free, and everything done to make the people self-dependent and self-supporting.— The Emperor thinks that by these means he will create in Algiers a respect for France "You will take the bread out of my wife's and his own power, by showing how they can be useful and beneficial to the Algerines in extending their privileges, enlarging their liberties, and giving a wide and liberal scope to individual enterprise, instead of keeping them subject to the bayonet, and discontented with the restrictions imposed upon their freedom, with the humiliation natural to a proud spirited people, who are made to feel daily that they their conquerors. - Cin. The Southern Press.

We receive exchanges from North Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana, and read them with conprofess to regard the result of the war as a verdict against secession and slavery, and advise the people to so recognize and abide by it. The greater portion of them seem to prisoners in his power, and that the tortures e honest and sincere. There are more indications of smouldering disloyalty in the deaths they died under his treatment State of Virginia, than in the press of any other State. The loss of the great source of revenue, slavery, goes extremely hard with the representatives of Virginia sentiment, more so than we would have expected. Occasionally in other States some newspaper betrays a latent spirit of rebellion, when the subject of slavery is mentioned, as did the Clarksville (Texas) Standard, when, in publishing certain general orders of Gen. Granger, it said: "Our citizens will perceive, the negroes are declared free. This declaration certainly does not legally free the negroes. It is a process of emancipation unknown to the Constitution, and without legitimate effect." But these instances are rare, and must not be accepted as reflections of the majority, who are wise enough to know that Alabama. "Talking of oaths reminds me of a local oke, which my pen cannot resist recording. A modest young country girl, on applying or rations to one of our relief agents, a few days ago, was asked if she had ever taken the oath. 'No, indeed,' was her terrified reply, 'I never swore in all my life.' 'But you must take the oath, my good girl,' said the agent, 'or I cannot give you the rations.' No, indeed, I can't, sir,' said the girl mother always taught me never to swear. The agent mildly persisted, and the maiden as pertinaciously refused all attempts at persuasion, until, overcome at last by the con flict between necessity and her high sense of moral duty, she stammered out, with downcast lids, 'Well, sir, if you will make ne do such a horrid, wicked thing-d-

In the engagement between the rebel ram Merrinac and our first Monitor, it will be remembered that the beak of the former broke off when they struck each other. In the con struction of the Dunderberg the prow is built solid to the length of 50 feet, and upon this s secured the iron beak or ram of wrought ron, extending forward some 15 feet, and being also several feet below the surface o he water. It is the opinion of naval men that the work of the Dunderberg in this respect is of such strength and solid construcon as, when collision takes place, to put the breaking off of the beak out of the que

It will be proved by the testimony of these count men that Wiertz caused the murder, in more than half a dozen cases, of unoffending pris oners; that his conduct was constantly of th most brutal and inhuman character; that he not only forced the guards to shoot prisoners without warning, but that in at least one case, for a slight misdemeanor, he caused two young men, prisoners, to be hanged with out trial or preparation. Review of News.

The laying of the Atlantic Telegraph cable is the great object of interest at present. On the morning of the 28th ult., the Great Eastern had paid out 500 miles of the cable with much success. The signals continued good and the weather was fine. The arrival of the Great Eastern at Heart's Content, Newfoundland, is expected hourly. Great doubt exists as to the successful working of the cable for any length of time even if it is successfully laid and remains theories in support of this doubt are of much truth.

Gov. Perry has issued his proclamation to for election of delegates to a State Conventhat month. The purpose of the Convention is "the altering or amending the present Constitution of South Carolina, or remodeling, or making a new one, which will conform to the great changes that have taken place in that State, and be more in accordance with republican principles, as to equality of representation.

The rebel General Wade Hampton has emigration of Southerners to foreign countries and recommending all who can do so to take the oath of allegiance.

The war against the Indians is to be pressed with great determination. General Dodge left Fort Leavenworth on the 3d inst., for Forts Kearney and Laramie. He is confident, with the forces now under his command, of putting a stop to Indian hostilities on the plains. The number of Indians now upon the war-path is very large.

The Philadelphia American says a proposition has been made to the Southern planters by English capitalists to supply the Southern people with goods, giving credit until the gathering of the crops, and taking produce in payment.

Merritt's Cavalry have arrived at Austin, Texas. The United States flag now floats over the Capitol of that State.

The English Election returns are complete. The result is the election of 367 Liberals and 290 Conservatives. The net Liberal gain is 27. The collection of Internal Revenue in the Third District of Kentucky, (Louisville) for July, amounted to $618,096 88. Mexican affairs are working badly for Maximilian. The French organs state that it will require one hundred thousand more men to destroy the bands of Juarists. Risings o the people occur daily, and take larger dimensions. Gen. Alverez, in the early part of July, inflicted a heavy blow upon the Imperialists at Yepalla, completely routing them and taking three pieces of artillery. Reports of French success are said to be unfound

President Johnson has pardoned Bishop Lynch, of South Carolina. The Bishop is at Rome at the present time. A lady of New Orleans, whose propertyhad been confiscated, has also been pardoned and her property stored at the instance of Gen. Butler.

A treaty has just been formed among the leading South American States, providing for the common defense against foreign intervention in the affairs of either, each binding itself to non-intercourse with any nation attacking either. This treaty is intended to counteract the machinations of Napoleon and Maximilian, and is to be binding for fifteen

Gen. Sheridan has been ordered to muster out of service all volunteer troops in the Department of Texas that he thinks he can dispense with. Preference will be given to veteran regiments having the shortest time

The commander of the Department of Texas has been re-instructed to abstain from any intervention in the war between France and the republic of Mexico.

It is stated that the Secretary of the Treasury has more than enough money on hand to pay every dollar due the soldiers. Five millions will be sent out by the next steamer for New Orleans to pay the Texas troops.

Capt. Drayton, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, died in Washington on Friday last. He participated with Admiral Dupont in the taking of Port Royal and other important places. Capt. Drayton was a South Carolinian.

The Chili Congress bas been for a fortnight considering Article 5 of their Constitution, which makes the Roman Catholic the religion of the Republic, to the exclusion of the public exercise of any other.

Eighth District-Randall (Union), 400. Ninth District-McKee

From later advices Randall's majority is probably about 4,000.

Conservatives have majorities as follows: Franklin, 550, a loss to the Union men of the Representative; Boyle, 164; Woodford, 435; Lincoln, 300; Scott, 750; Clarke gives about 200; Bourbon, 500; Jessamine, 300. Allen, Union, is certainly elected to the Senate from Clarke and Madison. Madison county gives the Union ticket 450 majority. Fayette county gives 450 majority for the Conservatives.

In the 8th Congressional District (Randall's,) as far as heard from, there is a gain for the Union party, upon the Constitutional Amendment, of two Senators and four Representatives. It is also stated that Bracken county has given Gen. Smith 140 majority All hail, Bracken.

We will publish the official returns from the several counties as fast as they are received at the Secretary of State's office. From the above returns it will be seen that the Union party have certainly elected four Members of Congress, while the probability is that two others, Messrs. Yeaman and Lowry, are also elected.

From Florida.

A correspondent of the Savannah Herald gives an account of affairs in Florida, from which we extract:

ENCOURAGING NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR. Here I met an intelligent and communicative citizen of Florida, from whom I obtained many items of interest. It is generally supposed that Florida has suffered much more than she actually has, but the fact is extent remains uninjured. The Union forces did much damage at Baldwin, but with almost this single exception the destruction of property sustained by Florida during the war is chiefly confined to her sea coast cities villages and towns, which, after all, leaves her people in a much more healthy and desirable condition than is generally suppos

THE SUGAR CROP.—The supply and price The Louisville Journal says: Experts in of sugar, says the Washington Republican, political calculation give the following as the probable results of the Communication of the ed. It is an indispensable article of domestic comfort, and naturally, when scarce and high, excites anxiety as to its future abundance and consequent cheapness. It is gratifying to the consumer to know that the production of the article is rapidly on the increase. Formerly, Louisiana was able to throw into market in a single season nearly four hundred and fifty thousand hogsheads of sugar, but the war has greatly crippled her saccharine resources, and last year she only furnished about eleven thousand hogsheads. It is gratifying to know that the crop this year is estimated at thirty thousand hogsheads. When the State is well The Cincinnati Commercial's dispatch of peace, and a free and properly compensatworked up again under the foster influence drive the wolf from the door, and a surplus from Lexington, dated the 8th, says: The ed industry, she will once more yield her abundance, and furnish a liberal supply of this indispensable article. Until we reach that point, which will require time, we must bear with high prices and the inconveniences of a short supply.

OBITUARY

Died, in South Frankfort, Ky., on the 7th August 1865, Churchill, youngest son of Wm. and Prudence B. Hunt, aged (9) nine years. "Early, bright, transient, chaste as morning dew

He sparkled, was exhaled, and went to heaven." A pearl has dropped, and the merry voice to which we have been accustomed to listen is sienced forever. Another silvery link has been added to the beautiful chain that binds the heart to the Eternal Throne, and another jewel sparkes in the Savior's crown. Like some beautiful flower whose delicate leaves have gradually faded beneath the burning rays of a summer sun, this young, gentle, and noble child withered under the touch of a painful disease, without a murmur. Slowly the light faded from the soft grey eye, in whose pure depths were reflected all the warm and generous impulses of his spotless soul: and so gradually did the hues of death steal over were unconscious of his approaching dissolution, and fondly hoped that he would still be spared to brighten their existence. He was too pure fer earth, and all that was loved and cherished of little Churchill has been laid beneath the sod of the valley. This little flower which blossomed so sweetly in the garden of life, has been transplanted to a serner and more glorious clime, where it will blossom in unfading beauty upon the banks of the golden river that flows fast by the throne of God. Dear little Church, we bid you a sad heart-adieu! If evry tear that shall be shed above your lowly dust were a flower, your grave would exhale a sweet perfume to heaven to mingle with that of the immortal blooms that are now around you. May He that "tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," pour the balm of healing on the hearts of the afflicted parents, and bereaved relations-and may they feel that the entrance in the glorious home of their lost treasure.
